

RECEIPT vs PRESCRIPTION

RECEIPT vs PRESCRIPTION

Don't say: "Here is your receipt."

Say: "Here is your prescription."

Receipt = a paper which is a confirmation that you paid for sth

Prescription = a paper which doctor writes to patients to get some medicine

AT THE DOCTOR'S D – doctor, P – patient, PH – pharmacist

D: Good morning, sir. Please have a seat there. What's the matter?

P: I've had a terrible sore throat and a bad cough for 3 days.

D: Do you have any other symptoms?

P: Yes, I had a fever last night. And right now I have a high temperature and I feel a bit dizzy.

D: Oh, I understand. Please take off your clothes to the waist. Take a deep breath. I need to listen to your lungs.

D: Well, it isn't pneumonia but it looks like angina. I'll give you a prescription for antibiotics called Angina Plus. Take one pill every 8 hours.

P: OK, when shall I come for a check-up?

D: Come after you finish taking the antibiotics and we'll see. If you don't feel better, we will also have to run a blood test and will need a urine sample.

P: Thank you very much, doctor.

AT THE PHARMACY

P: I'd like one Angina Plus, please.

D: OK. Here you are and here is your receipt. It's 125, please.
